W. C. HESTER

ABDUL THE TIMID.

The Crafty Turkish Despot Wore a Crown of Terror.

HIS PALACE LIKE A PRISON.

Yildiz, a Place of Mystery, Was the Production and the Abode of Fear Unutterable—His Dread of Assassination and His Horror of the Dark.

For long years Abdul Hamid had been haunted and tormented by the nightmare of death. In every shadow he seemed to see an assassin. All his vast power could not bring him one moment of peace and happiness. Not for one moment was Turkey's monarch at ease.

Year by year his fears had been growing upon him. He had a terror of the dark. At night Yildiz always blazed with lights. His sleep had become restless, and he would awaken at the slightest sound. Sometimes he would come out of his sleep with a start, frightened by a nightmare, and that would mean hours of wakefulness. At such times he would find the solitude of his room unbearable, and he would send for a sorcerer, who would explain the dream, or a slave, who would read to him from one of his favorite books, those giving detailed accounts of assassinations, executions and other horrors.

He was always armed. His clothes were lined with enormous pockets, which served him both as arsenals and archives and bulged with pistols and rolls of spies' reports.

Everybody at Yildiz was afraid of being shot by him. He was likely to fire at the slightest action that might seem to him suspicious. There is a story that one day a gardener working in the park of Yildiz, on seeing the sultan approach, rose quickly from a stooping posture to assume a respectful attitude. Abdul Hamid, startled by his sudden appearance and suspecting some evil motive, at once fired at him. The man fell dead. Later, as no weapon was found on his body, it had to be acknowledged that a blunder had been committed. Such is the tale told by the son of the late Prince of Samos, who was one of the sultan's ministers.

Yildiz, scene of innumerable horrors, had been built by Abdul Hamid himself, and he had made it more like a labyrinth than a palace. It was the production and the abode of fear unutterable. Surely no sane mind planned it. To guard against conspirators getting a plan of his residence its master was continually changing its internal arrangements, walling up doors, opening new ones, narrowing passages, dividing rooms by partitions, making windows and closing them again. It was a constantly changing maze.

To spare himself the danger of crossing the graveled path that separated his apartments from his harem he had linked his residence by flying bridges to the harem on the one side and to the imperial theater on the other. This theater was a gloomy little place, where the monarch would sit entirely hidden from view in his box while actresses and singers from Paris and other European cities entertained him. He never came into view, never applauded, and the visible audience consisted of a few members of his family.

The building used by Abdul Hamid as his private residence looked more like a prison, for all the lower windows were securely barred and the heavy iron doors were of great strength and capable of being firmly bolted inside.

Every room in the palace was provided with a couch on which the sultan could sleep if he felt inclined. Nobody ever knew in what room he would sleep on any given night. Before retiring to rest he would sometimes call his attendants and say to them: "Keep a good lookout. I am going to sleep tonight in this room." But he would invariably sleep somewhere else.

On the roof of the imperial apartments was an astronomical observatory which had been fitted up with an exceedingly good telescope by a Parisian firm. This observatory was a favorite place with the sultan, yet he took not the slightest interest in astronomy. The telescope was there to serve his own purpose of espionage, for he used it almost exclusively for the purpose of watching the residence of Prince Yusuf Izzedin, eldest son of Abdul Aziz and heir presumptive to the throne. Its glass was never turned upon the heavens.

But sometimes from his lonely lookout the monarch saw stranger things than the residence of Prince Yusuf, things that no other human being had ever dreamed of. There were times when his morbid imagination played curious pranks with him.

It was on the day following an attempt upon his life by one Ali Souavi and a revolt at Teheran, both of which incidents greatly upset him, that Abdul Hamid hurried down from his observatory with a wild look in his eyes and called his first secretary, who at that time was Ali Fuad Bey. He led the secretary to a window, and, pointing to the sublime porte some miles away, he said, trembling with fear:

"Did you see them? They have met yonder to proclaim my downfall!" "Who?" asked the startled secretary. "My ministers," exclaimed the sultan. "My own ministers are now in the act of deposing me. Can't you see them?"

This statement was quite unfounded, and it was a long time before the secretary could calm his frightened master. Philadelphia Ledger.

Damage Suit Against L. & N.

Dixie McKinley, administrator of the estate of Sylvester Whalen, through his attorney, M. C. Swinford, filed suit in the Harrison Circuit Court last week against the Louisville and Nashville railroad asking damages in the sum of $25,000 for the death of Whalen. Whalen was a citizen of Harrison county and was killed in the yards in this city on Sunday afternoon, July 23, while attending to his duties as yard sweeper. He was at work cleaning the tracks when an engine backed down on him, badly mangled his body and death resulting instantly.

Robbed Moving Freight Train.

Probably the most unique train robbery ever pulled off occurred a few days ago on the Louisville and Nashville line between Lexington and Frankfort when unknown thieves boarded a freight and threw off several boxes of merchandise which was hauled away in a wagon which followed the train. The plan was successfully worked while two special detectives were on the train on the lookout for the culprits. Just as the freight pulled out of Ridgeway, a small station near Frankfort, with the detectives on board, several men jumped into a merchandise car and began throwing off boxes of goods. The detectives were signaled by the conductor in charge of the train and they made an effort to catch the robbers. Before the officers could overtake them they had loaded the boxes in the wagon, driving rapidly away and escaped.

Comrades Meet After 42 Years.

The unveiling of the Morgan statue in Lexington last Wednesday had the effect of bringing together a large number of the old warriors who had not seen their comrades for years, but the most pleasant surprise was afforded Capt. James McDonald, of Kansas City, Mo., who is in Paris on a visit to friends, when he met with an old comrade, J. J. Carrigan, of Nicholasville.

The meeting was a surprise to both, each thinking the other had passed over the river and it was the greeting of old comrades that had been separated for forty-two years when they came upon each other. Capt. McDonald and Mr. Carrigan are two of the three surviving members of the famous Haimilton Guards, Company G., Second Kentucky Infantry that fought under General Morgan.

Capt. McDonald's home was formerly in Paris and it was here that he enlisted in the service. Just at the close of the war he was commissioned as captain as a reward for his bravery during his struggle for the Southland. Capt. McDonald is an independent oil producer and has been fighting the Standard Oil Company for a number of years.
